You spoke of the engineer students, and you said that you thought they ought to have more experience in the reserve, could you give any idea as to how you would enable them to gain that experience before sending them to sea--They would have to go on every trial trip. I do not know whether the (The witnet government would think it worth while to place a Mr. J. B. steam vessel at their disposal, in order that they Stevcus, K. N. might learn the working of machinery, but I think it . is possible that it might pay. 3 JNor-18 4919. Do not you think it would be well, if, for six months they were attached to a ship, not as part of the complement, but to gain experience--Yes, it would be very much better than keeping them in the reserve. 4920. (The Chairmftn.) Do you think that an engine-room artificer who has been in charge of the engines of a small vessel would, on an emergency, bo as capable of taking charge of the engines of the Triumph as an engineer student just out of his time--I do. withdrew.) Lingham Ennis, Engine-room 4921. The Chairman.) Where are you now serving--In the Waterwitch. 4922. What is your trade--An engine-fitter. 4923. Where did you learn your trade--At a commercial foundry in St....
